

Bieke Casteleyn

Belgian interior designer Bieke Casteleyn reinforces her love for daring and slightly unusual homes with Blushed Nude, a newly built apartment at the seaside. Her clients asked for a never-ending holiday atmosphere and wanted something different at the same time. Instead of venturing into the characteristic Ibiza aesthetic, she intuitively explored an understated luxury that is keen to amaze and surprise. The repeated use of certain materials and colours proved instrumental for this. Reclaimed wood, pastels and beige shades, glass windows reminiscent of Marrakesh, and more are part of a refined palette. Loyal to her obsession with details, Casteleyn ensured that the door handles and fireplace are custom design, as well as several pieces of furniture. Pay attention to the bar stools since these are coveted vintage finds, and the flagstones in the kitchen that beautifully run over into a cast floor. Add to this the skills with which the designer carefully determined proportions and balance, and you will not easily forget this striking project from one of Belgium's finest.
